An excellent lead seal of Theodoros Monomachos, krites of the Armeniakoi (11th cent.) Obverse: The bust of Saint George, facial, nimbate, in military garments, holding a cross in his right hand, columnar inscription: Ο Α (ΓΙΟC)/ΓΕ-ΩΡΓ(ΙΟC) = Ὁ ἅγιος Γεώργιος (Saint George), all within dotted border, partly existing. Reverse: Inscription in 6 lines, all within dotted border: [Θ]Ε[Ο]/[Δ]ΟΡΩ ΚΡ(ΙΤΗ)/ΤΩΝ ΑΡΜΕ/ΝΙΑΚΩΝ ΤΩ/MONOMA/ΧΩ= Θεοδώρω κριτῇ τῶν Ἀρμενιакῶν τῷ Μονομάχῳ (Of Theodoros krites of the theme of Armeniakon the Monomachos). Theodoros, who was governor of Armeniakoi, belonged to the famous byzantine family of functionaries Monomachoi (Kazhdan, Alexander, ed. (1991), Oxford Dictionary of Byzantium, Oxford University Press, p. 1398). Concerning the themes of Asia Minor, one of which was the Armeniakon, what is clear is that at some point in the mid-7th century, probably in the late 630s and 640s, the Empire's field armies were withdrawn to Anatolia, the last major contiguous territory remaining to the Empire, and assigned to the districts that became known as the themes. Territorially, each of the new themes encompassed several of the older provinces, and with a few exceptions, seems to have followed the old provincial boundaries. The first four themes were those of the Armeniacs, Anatolics and Thracians, and the Opsician theme. The Armeniac Theme (Θέμα Ἀρμενιакῶν, Thema Armeniakōn), first mentioned in 667, was the successor of the Army of Armenia. It occupied the old areas of the Pontus, Armenia Minor and northern Cappadocia, with its capital at Amasea. Bibliography: Haldon, John F. (1990), Byzantium in the Seventh Century: The Transformation of a Culture, Cambridge University Press; Haldon, John F. (1999), Warfare, state and society in the Byzantine world, 565–1204, Routledge; Kazhdan, Alexander, ed. (1991), Oxford Dictionary of Byzantium, Oxford University Press, pp. 89-90. Condition: Very Fine, nice reddish patina. Slightly off-center sealing nevertheless completely legible inscription. Weight: 9.78 gr Diameter: 25 mm

Starting price: 40 EUR

(I seal the words and documents of Chetam doux and strategos...). Most probably the seal belongs to the Armenian Theodoros Chetames, mentioned in Eastern sources as the first commander of Metilene, who was installed in 1074 by Philaretos Brachamios amidst the chaos which followed the Battle of Manzikert. In 1094/95 he was appointed commander of Edessa by the Seljuks, but proceeded to gain control of the city for himself. In 1098 he was murdered in Edessa, when the First Crusade had arrived, and was succeeded by Baldwin of Boulogne, the later king of Jerusalem (cf. Cheynet, Sceaux de la collection Zacos, 34. Sandrovskaja/Seibt p. 80, no. 48 and Leu Numismatic Web Auction 9, Lot 1363, for a similar seal of the same person but from a different boulloterion). Reverse: Inscription in 7 (?) lines (the first and second (?) trimmed): .../. ΤΩ [ΦΙ]/[Λ]ΑΡΕΤΩ Ν Ι/ΚΑΝΑΤΟ Λ(ΟΓΕ)/ΠΑΡΑΣΧΕ/[Τ]Ω ΔΟΜΕC/[Τ]ΙΚΩ = [Ἐλεος?] τῷ Φιλαρέτῳ Ἰκανάτῳ Λόγε πάρασχε τῷ δομειστίκῳ (Lord, give your mercy to Philaretos Ikanatos the domestikos). Comments: It appears that since the beginning of the 7th century, the forces of the two magistri militum praesentales incorporated in a united central conflict army under imperial command called Opsikion (from lat. obsequium = escort). Opsikion, which at first guarded both Thrace and Bithynia, was later established only in Bithynia, where the homonymous theme was formed. In the end of the same century, according to the sources, two new units appear in Constantinople, “noumera” and “tiheote”, assigned to guard the gates and the walls of the Great Palace, which was fortified by emperor Justinian II (685-695, 705-711). The most important change in the status quo of Constantinople’s army forces, a change that characterized the entire Middle Byzantine period, took place around the middle of the 8th century on Constantine V’s (741-775) initiative. Having just successfully suppressed the rebellion of Artabasdos, comes of Opsikion, the emperor took measures to avoid similar incidents in the future. First he weakened the theme of Opsikion and then he went on with the reorganization of the “scholae” and the “excubites” (as they were then called). Constantine recruited new soldiers for the imperial guard, seeing that they were faithful to him and to his iconoclastic policy. The new effective units that resulted from this reorganization were named “tagmata” and their duties were extended: they no longer were exclusively an imperial guard, not even guard of Constantinople, as from that time they would serve as a central conflict army, equivalent to the old Opsikion, and they would participate in the emperor’s campaigns. The oldest tagmata were the scholae and the excubitores, each with its own domestikos in command. Gradually, the term “scholarioi” came to designate the soldiers of the tagmata in general, while the domestikos ton scholon was second in command under the general of Anatolikon and later (9th-10th c.) was charged with the command of campaigns in the emperor’s absence. As tagmata had by then merely military duties, the so-called “hetairiae” were formed as the emperor’s bodyguard. Eirene Athenaia (780-8-2) came across the reaction of scholarioi when she attempted to repeal the iconoclastic policies of her predecessors. For this reason, she discharged the old soldiers of tagmata and replaced them with new ones. In the same time, she introduced a third tagma, called “Arithmos” or “Vigla”, by men of the thematic army that were faithful to her. A little later, Nikephoros I (802-811) established the tagma of “ikanatoi”. These four “tagmata” would be the core of Constantinople’s guard until the 11th century. It is until the same period that the tagma of Athanatoi, founded by John I Tzimiskes (969-976) is being mentioned. Condition: Somewhat trimmed on obverse and partly off-

Byzantine lead seal of Philaretos Brachamios patrikios (11th cent.) Obverse: Decoration and cross, inscription in 4 lines: + ΣΦΡΑΓΙΣ ΦΙΛΑΡΕΤΟΥ= Σφραγίς Φιλαρέτου (The seal of Philaretos), all within a dotted border. Reverse: Decoration, inscription in 4 lines: ΠΑΤΡΙΚΙΟΥ ΤΟΥ ΒΡΑΧΑΜΗ = πατρικίου τοῦ Βραχάμη (patrikios the Brachames), all within a dotted border. Philaretos Brachamios (Varazhnuni), Romanos IV's strategos, doux and, according to Anna Komnene (An.Komn. 2:64.5—8), domestikos, was —if we believe MICHAEL I THE SYRIAN (Chronique, tr. Chabot 3:173)— an Armenian robber from the village of Shurbaz; thus his identification as a Byz. general is questionable. After Romanos IV's blinding, Philaretos became independent ruler of Tarsos, Antioch, Edessa, Melitene, and some other eastern centers. Greek, Syriac, and Armenian traditions all charge Philaretos with cruelty and greed: he allegedly confiscated the riches of Antiochene magnates and distributed them among his supporters. After Nikephoros III's accession to the throne, Philaretos acknowledged his allegiance to the Byz. and was proclaimed kouropalates and domestikos ton scholon of the East; in 1084 he surrendered Antioch to the Turks. He disappeared thereafter from the scene, but an anonymous Syriac chronicle mentions the sons of Philaretos domestikos, "Christians" (i.e., Orthodox) who ruled over Maras and Black Mountain (A.S. Tritton, H.A.R. Gibb, JRAS [Jan. 1933] 720. The family is not known after the 11th C., except in 1171 when Brachamioi served as messengers in negotiations between Manuel I and the Armenians. Byzantine lead seal of Ioannes hypatos and protonotarios of Anatolikon (8th cent.) Obverse: Invocative cruciform monogram, inscribed in the 4 corners: ΘΕΟΤΟΚΕ ΒΟΗΘΕΙ ΤΩ ΚΩ ΔΟΥΛΩ= Θεοτόκε, βοήθει τῷ σῷ δούλῳ (Mother of God, help your servant), no visible border. Reverse: Cross, inscription in 5 lines: + ΙΩ(ΑΝΝΗ)ΥΠΑΤΩ/ΚΑΙ ΠΡΩΤΟ/ΝΟΤ(ΑΡΙΩ) ΤΩΝ Α/[ΝΑ]ΤΟΛΙΚ(ΩΝ)= + Ἰωάννη ὑπάτῳ καὶ πρωτονοταρίῳ τῶν Ἀνατολικῶν (John hypatos and protonotarios of the theme of Anatolikon), no visible border. Concerning the themes of Asia Minor, one of which was the Anatolikon, what is clear is that at some point in the mid-7th century, probably in the late 630s and 640s, the Empire's field armies were withdrawn to Anatolia, the last major contiguous territory remaining to the Empire, and assigned to the districts that became known as the themes. Territorially, each of the new themes encompassed several of the older provinces, and with a few exceptions, seems to have followed the old provincial boundaries. The first four themes were those of the Armeniacs, Anatolics and Thraceseians, and the Opsician theme. The Armeniac Theme (Θέμα Ἀρμενιακῶν, Thema Armeniakōn), first mentioned in 667, was the successor of the Army of Armenia. It occupied the old areas of the Pontus, Armenia Minor and northern Cappadocia, with its capital at Amasea. The Anatolic Theme (Θέμα Ἀνατολικῶν, Thema Anatolikōn), first mentioned in 669, was the successor of the Army of the East (Ἀνατολή, Anatolē). It covered southern central Asia Minor, and its capital was Amorium. Together, these two themes formed the first tier of defence of Byzantine Anatolia, bordering Muslim Armenia and Syria respectively. Bibliography: Haldon, John F. Byzantine lead seal of Kosmas asekrete (first half of 7th cent.) Obverse: Five letters in cruciform shape: KOCMA= Κοσμά (Of Kosmas), all within wreath border. Reverse: An S within a large latin a (in the form of U)= As (ekrete), all within wreath border. The term asekrete (Greek: ἀσηκρητής, romanized: asēkrētis, invariable form) designated a senior class of secretaries in the Byzantine imperial court in the 6th–12th centuries. The term is derived from the Latin a secretis, and in its full form was "asekrete of the court" (ἀσηκρητής τῆς αὐλῆς, asēkrētis tēs aulēs).[1][2] It seems to be an innovation of the 6th century, as the contemporary historian Procopius of Caesarea found it necessary to explain it to his readers. Modern scholars have sometimes assumed that it dates to the 4th century, but the only reference to it, in the acts of the Council of Chalcedon, actually dates from a 6th-century translation of the document. The asekrete succeeded the referendarii as the senior-most members of the imperial secretariat, above the notarii. Some of them were attached to the praetorian prefectures. Seals of the office's holders survive from the 6th and 7th centuries, while a reference from the Third Council of Constantinople (680) indicates the existence of a senior asekrete who functioned as head of the class, probably the predecessor of the later protasekrete. The asekrete are attested as holding mid-level dignities, from the rank of protospatharios to spatharios and sometimes even lower. Eminent members of the class included the emperor Anastasios II (r. 715–717), and the Patriarchs of Constantinople Tarasios (784–806) and Nikephoros I (806–815). The office continues to be mentioned until the 12th century, after which it disappears, with the generic term grammatikos taking its place (cf. Kazdan et alii, Oxford Dictionary of Byzantium, I, p. 204). There are known several parallel seals of the owner of this seal Kosmas asekrete, proving his important dignity during first half of 7th cent. Condition: Very Fine Weight: 10.23 gr Diameter: 21 mm

Uncertain. 4th-3rd centuries BC. PB Tessera Lead coins were issued in several areas of the ancient Greek world. Most prominent among the issuers are Alexander Jannaeus of Judaea and the rulers of the Nabataean kingdom. Yet unique lead objects from other areas are periodically seen as well, sometimes directly copying one or both sides of an official coin, sometimes bearing completely unknown fantasy types (for example, CNG 85, 330 and BCD Thessaly 1305). These enigmatic pieces are frequently identified as distribution tokens or entry tickets, an untenable attribution given the lack of precise provenance. Other possible uses for the objects abound, including: tokens, bullae, weights, contemporary or modern counterfeits, funerary money, test-pieces or strikes, and even circulating coinage. Of these suggestions, a use as a token or test-piece is most likely. As tokens, the objects may have initially served as proof or guarantee of some sort. As test-pieces, the objects would have served to demonstrate coin designs for approval prior to mass striking, as pattern coins do in the modern world. CAROLINGIANS. Charles le Simple (the Simple). As Charles IV, King of West Francia, 898-922. AR Denier (22mm, 1.50 g, 6h). Metallum (Melle) mint. + CARLV(etrograde S) REX R (sic), cross pattée / MET/ALO in two lines. Depuyrot 629; M&G –; MEC –; Fécamp 8388-8400. EF, toned, traces of underlying luster, minor deposits. For the most part, the coinage of Charles le Chauve revived the monogram deniers of Charlemagne. However, the Melle mint recalled the mint-name reverse type first issued under Louis le Pieux. These original two line types were issued from 818-822/3 and bear witness to a time of economic expansion in the Carolingian Empire. In his early coinages, Louis attempted to curtail the number of mints to ensure quality. This type, however, was issued in high quality at a tremendous number of mints. No less than 45 locations produced coins of this type, including Arles, Cologne, Quentovic, Pavia, and Venice, to name a few. Melle, as the location of the largest and most productive silver mine in Carolingian territory, was a particularly important mint that produced vast numbers of coins during the period. Due to the high quality of these issues, the type proved to be extremely popular and was issued under Charles le Chauve for a number of decades with the legend META/LLVM before being reissued under Charles le Simple with the legend MET/ALO.
