According to Suetonius, Gaius Octavius, later known as Augustus, was born the morning of September 23, 63 BC, under the sign of Capricorn. Modern astrologers tend to favor the sun sign, but the ancients believed the rising moon was more important in a horoscope, so it is more likely Capricorn was his moon sign. Laureate head right / The Dea Caelestis riding right on lion, her head facing, holding thunderbolt and scepter; below, water gushing from rocks on left. RIC IV 266; RSC 222. The INDVLGENTIA type of Septimius is one of the most picturesque and also one of the most common (in silver) of the period. Most people do not realize, however, that there are four distinct reverse types: 1) Dea Caelestis, looking to front, riding a lion leaping to the right, holding a thunderbolt and scepter; 2) Dea Caelestis, looking right, riding a lion leaping to the right, holding a thunderbolt and scepter; 3) Dea Caelestis, looking to front, riding a lion leaping to the right, holding a drum and scepter; 4) Dea Caelestis, looking front, riding a lion leaping to the right, holding a drum, no scepter. The first two varieties are the most common. The third variety is very rare. The last variety is extremely rare. Similar types were also struck in the name of Caracalla in AD 203. Interestingly, the direction of the deity's head appears to have a chronological significance. Condition: Very Fine Weight: 2.57 gr Diameter: 20 mm

- 421  Lead seal of Philaretos Brachamios sebastos and domestikos of Eoas (East) (ca 1078-1084). A historically important and artistically nice seal! Condition: Slightly off-centered, somewhat trimmed on obv., otherwise VF. Attractive natural dark patina. Obverse: Saint Theodore, nimbate, standing facing, in military garments, holding a spear in his right hand, and resting his left hand on a shield. Columnar inscription: [Ο Α]Γ[Ι]ΟC]-Θ/Ε/Ω-Δ/Ο-Ρ(ΟC) = Ὁ ἅγιος Θεόδωρος (Saint Theodoros), all within dotted border. Reverse: Inscription in 7 lines, following a decorative pattern, all within dotted border: ΤΟΝ ΕΩΑC/Δ(Ο)Μ(ΕC)Τ(ΙΚΟΝ) CΚΕΠ(Ε)ΜΑΡ(ΤΥC) Ω ΤΟΝ C[Ε]/[Β]ΑCΤΩΝ ΦΙ/[Λ]ΑΡΕΤΟΝ/[ΒΡ]ΑΧΑΜ(ΙΟΝ) = Τὸν Ἐώας δομέστικον σκέπε, ὦ μάρτυς, τὸν σεβαστὸν Φιλάρητον Βραχάμιον (Oh martyr [Theodoros], protect Philaretos Brachamios, the domestikos of East and sebastos). Philaretos Brachamios (Varazhnuni), Romanos IV's strategos, doux and, according to Anna Komnene (An. Komn. 2:64.5-8), and the present seal, domestikos, was —if we believe MICHAEL I THE SYRIAN (Chronique, tr. Chabot 3:173)— an Armenian robber from the village of Shurbaz; thus his identification as a Byz. gen-eral is questionable. After Romanos IV's blinding, Philaretos became independent ruler of Tarsos, Antioch, Edessa, Melitene, and some other east-ern centers. Greek, Syriac, and Armenian tradi-tions all charge Philaretos with cruelty and greed: he allegedly confiscated the riches of Antiochene magnates and distributed them among his sup-porters. After Nikephoros III's accession to the throne (1078), Philaretos acknowledged his allegiance to the Byz. and was proclaimed kouropalates and do-mestikos ton scholon of the East; in 1084 he surren-dered Antioch to the Turks. He disappeared thereafter from the scene, but an anonymous Syriac chronicle mentions the sons of Philaretos domestikos, "Christians" (i.e., Orthodox) who ruled over Maras and Black Mountain (A.S. Tritton, H.A.R. Gibb, JRAS [Jan. 1933] 720. The family is not known after the 11th cent., except in 1171 when Brachamioi served as messengers in nego-tiations between Manuel I and the Armenians. - 422  Lead seal of John N., and epi ton deeseon (11th cent.) Condition: Slightly off-centered, trimmed on either side, otherwise F. Obverse: Bust of Mother of God, facial, with Jesus Christ as child on her right hand, also facial, both nimbate, the usual inscription M(HTH)P-Θ(ΕΟ)Υ (Mother of God), circular inscription surrounding them: Κ(ΥΠΙ)Ε ΒΟΗΘΕΙ [ΤΩ C]Ω ΔΟΥ(ΛΩ) = Κύριε, βοήθει τῷ σῷ δούλῳ (Lord, help your servant), all within dotted border. Reverse: The bust of saint Symeon (the Stylites) in monk's garments, facial, nimbate, blessing by his right, columnar inscription [Ο Α(ΓΙΟC)]/C/Y/M- ΕΩΝ = Ὁ ἅγιος Συμεῶν (Saint Symeon), circular inscription surrounding him: ΙΩ(ΑΝΝΗ) ΤΩ ΚΛΕΙ... [ΕΠΙ ΤΩ]Ν ΔΕΗCΕ(ΩΝ) = Ἰωάννη τῷ κλει... καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν δεήσεων (John N., and epi ton deeseon), all within dotted border. The epi tōn deēseōn (Greek: ὁ ἐπὶ τῶν δεήσεων, "the one in charge of petitions") was a Byzantine office, whose holder was responsible for receiving and answering petitions to the Byzantine emperor. Subordinate officials with the same title also existed in the provinces, and the Patriarch of Constantinople also had an epi tōn deēseōn. The office is usually considered (cf. Bury) as the direct continuation of the late Roman magister memoriae, but this identification is not certain. The title is first attested in a 7th-century seal. In the lists of precedence like the Klētorologion, he was counted among the judicial officials (kritai), and surviving seals show that until the 11th century, its holders held relatively mid-ranking dignities, no higher than prōtospatharios. From the latter half of the 11th century however and during the 12th, the office rose much in importance, with its holders receiving higher titles and being drawn from among the Empire's nobility. The last named holder, George Chatzikes, is attested in 1321, but the office is still mentioned as active decades later by Pseudo-Kodinos. It is unknown if he had a dedicated staff (officium), or what its composition may have been; it is absent in the Klētorologion, but a seal of a probably subordinate "notary of the petitions" (notarios tōn deēseōn) is known. Seals also attest to the existence of provincial officials titled epi tōn deēseōn, as in Sicily and the Peloponnese. Bibliography: Bury, John B. (Of Konstantinos, imperial protospatharios and krites over the Hippodromos...). The Hippodrome of Constantinople (Greek: Ἴππόδρομος τῆς Κωνσταντινουπόλεως) was a circus that was the sporting and social centre of Constantinople, capital of the Byzantine Empire. Today it is a square named Sultanahmet Meydanı (Sultan Ahmet Square) in the Turkish city of Istanbul, with a few fragments of the original structure surviving. The word hippodrome comes from the Greek hippos (ἵππος), horse, and dromos (δρόμος), path or way. Horse racing and chariot racing were popular pastimes in the ancient world and hippodromes were common features of Greek cities in the Hellenistic, Roman and Byzantine era. Although the Hippodrome is usually associated with Constantinople's days of glory as an imperial capital, it actually predates that era. The first Hippodrome was built when the city was called Byzantium, and was a provincial town of moderate importance. In AD 203 the Emperor Septimius Severus rebuilt the city and expanded its walls, endowing it with a hippodrome, an arena for chariot races and other entertainment. In AD 324, the Emperor Constantine the Great decided to move the seat of the government from Rome to Byzantium, which he renamed Nova Roma (New Rome). This name failed to impress and the city soon became known as Constantinople, the City of Constantine. Constantine greatly enlarged the city, and one of his major undertakings was the renovation of the Hippodrome. It is estimated that the Hippodrome of Constantine was about 450 m (1,476 ft) long and 130 m (427 ft) wide. Its stands were capable of holding 100,000 spectators. The race-track at the Hippodrome was U-shaped, and the Kathisma (emperor's lodge) was located at the eastern end of the track. The Kathisma could be accessed directly from the Great Palace through a passage which only the emperor or other members of the imperial family could use. The Hippodrome Boxes, which had four statues of horses in gilded copper on top, stood at the northern end; and the Sphendone (curved tribune of the U-shaped structure, the lower part of which still survives) stood at the southern end. These four gilded horses, now called the Horses of Saint Mark, whose exact Greek or Roman ancestry has never been determined, were looted during the Fourth Crusade in 1204 and installed on the façade of St Mark's Basilica in Venice. The track was lined with other bronze statues of famous horses and chariot drivers, none of which survive. The hippodrome was filled with statues of gods, emperors and heroes, among them some famous works, such as a Heracles by Lysippos, Romulus and Remus with their wolf and the Serpent Column of the Plataean tripod. In his book De Ceremoniis (book II,15, 589), the emperor Constantine Porphyrogenitus described the decorations in the hippodrome at the occasion of the visit of Saracen or Arab visitors, mentioning the purple hangings and rare tapestries. Throughout the Byzantine period, the Hippodrome was the centre of the city's social life. Huge amounts were bet on chariot races, and initially four teams took part in these races, each one financially sponsored and supported by a different political party (Deme) within the Roman/Byzantine Senate: The Blues (Venetoi), the Greens (Prasinioi), the Reds (Rousioi) and the Whites (Leukoi). The Reds (Rousioi) and the Whites (Leukoi) gradually weakened and were absorbed by the other two major factions (the Blues and Greens). A total of up to eight chariots (two chariots per team), powered by four horses each, competed on the racing track of the Hippodrome. These races were not simple sporting events, but also provided some of the rare occasions in which the Emperor and the common citizens could come together in a single venue. Political discussions were often made at the Hippodrome, which could be directly accessed by the Emperor through a passage that connected the Kathisma (Emperor's Loge at the eastern tribune) with the Great Palace of Constantinople Condition: Very Fine Weight: 9.84 gr Diameter: 21 mm

- 442  Byzantine lead seal of John hypatos and imperial asekreteis (8th cent.) Condition: Off-centered with oxidation, otherwise Very Fine/Fine. Obverse: Central inscription in 2 lines, ΘΕΟΤΟΚΕ = Θεοτόκε (Mother of God), between similar decorative patterns with a cross in the middle, within wreath border, a surrounding circular inscription, [+ΒΟΗΘΕΙ ΤΩ] ΚΩ ΔΟΥΛΩ = + βοήθει τῷ σῶ δούλῳ (help your servant). Reverse: Central inscription in 3 lines, ΙΩΑΝΝΗ ΥΠΑΤΩ = Ἰωάννη ὑπάτῳ (John hypatos), between similar decorative patterns with a cross in the middle, within wreath border, a surrounding circular inscription, [+ΤΩ] ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΩ ΑΣΗΚΡΗΤΗ = + τῷ βασιλικῷ ἀσηκρήτη (the imperial asekreteis). The term asekreteis (Greek: ἀσηκρήτις, romanized: asēkrētis, invariable form) designated a senior class of secretaries in the Byzantine imperial court in the 6th–12th centuries. The term is derived from the Latin a secretis, and in its full form was "asekreteis of the court" (ἀσηκρήτις τῆς αὐλῆς, asēkrētis tēs aulēs). It seems to be an innovation of the 6th century, as the contemporary historian Procopius of Caesarea found it necessary to explain it to his readers. Modern scholars have sometimes assumed that it dates to the 4th century, but the only reference to it, in the acts of the Council of Chalcedon, actually dates from a 6th-century translation of the document. The asekreteis succeeded the referendarii as the senior-most members of the imperial secretariat, above the notarii. Some of them were attached to the praetorian prefectures. Seals of the office's holders survive from the 6th and 7th centuries, while a reference from the Third Council of Constantinople (680) indicates the existence of a senior asekreteis who functioned as head of the class, probably the predecessor of the later protasekreteis. The asekreteis are attested as holding mid-level dignities, from the rank of protospatharios to spatharios and sometimes even lower. Eminent members of the class included the emperor Anastasios II (r. 715–717), and the Patriarchs of Constantinople Tarasios (784–806) and Nikephoros I (806–815). The office continues to be mentioned until the 12th century, after which it disappears, with the generic term grammatikos taking its place (cf. Kazdan et alii, Oxford Dictionary of Byzantium, I, p. 204). Weight: 23.50 gr Diameter: 31 mm

Reverse: Inscription in 5 lines, following a cross, no visible border: + ΛΕΟ/[Ν]ΤΗΘ ΠΡΩΤΟΠ[Α]/Θ(ΑΡΙΩ) ΚΑΙ ΔΡΟΥΓΚ/ΤΟΥ.../Π... = Λεοντίῳ πρωτοσπαθαρίῳ καὶ δρουγκαρίῳ τοῦ (Leontios protospatharios end drungarios of...). A drungarios, also spelled drungarios (Greek: δρουγγάριος, Latin: drungarius) and sometimes anglicized as Drungary, was a military rank of the late Roman and Byzantine empires, signifying the commander of a formation known as drungos, from Gaulish or from a Germanic language. In the late 6th century, the Emperor Maurice (r. 582–602) in his Strategikon used drungos to refer to a specific tactical deployment, usually of cavalry, although still in the general sense of "grouping, division". The term drungarios (Greek: δρουγγάριος) is not documented before the early 7th century but might have been used as an informal or unofficial designation before that date. The office and the corresponding unit appear to have initially referred to ad hoc arrangements, but during the early 7th century these were formalized, like much of the Eastern Roman army's rank structure. In the new military-administrative theme system, every major division, called a thema (Greek: θέμα), was further divided into tourmai. Each tourma was divided into moirai (Greek: μοίραι) or drungoi. Which in turn were composed of several banda. Thus each moira or drungos was the analogue of a modern regiment or brigade, initially circa 1000 men strong (and hence also referred to as a chiliarchia), although on occasion it could rise to 3000 men. Emperor Leo VI the Wise (r. 886–912) is recorded as having established drungoi of only 400 men for the new smaller themes. The rank of drungarios was one of the lowest military ranks that carried an accompanying court title, ranging from hypatos to vestētōr. The rank of drungarios was also used in the Byzantine navy to designate its admirals. The drungarios tou [basilikou] ploīmou (Greek: δρουγγάριος τοῦ [βασιλικοῦ] πλοῖμου) was the commander of the central Imperial Fleet, based at and around Constantinople. The provincial ("thematic") fleets were also commanded by a drungarios (although it was later replaced by the more exalted rank of strategos), to whose title was added the name of the thema under his command, e.g. drungarios tōn Kibyrrhaiōtōn (Greek: δρουγγάριος τῶν Κιβυρραιωτῶν, one of the subordinate admirals of the Cibyrrhaeot Theme). The position of the drungarios tou ploīmou first occurs in the so-called Taktikon Uspensky of circa 842, and the exact date of its establishment is unclear. - 447  Byzantine lead seal of Michael krites (?) ton Anatolikon (ca 11th cent.) Obverse: Inscription in 4 lines, ending in decorative pattern, Θ(ΕΟΤΟ)ΚΕ ΒΟ/ΗΘΕΙ ΤΩ/ΣΩ ΔΟΥΛΩ ΜΙΧΑΗ[Λ] = Θεοτόκε βοήθει τῷ σῶ δούλῳ Μιχαήλ (Mother of God, help your servant Michael), all within dotted border, only in traces visible now. Reverse: Inscription in 4 lines, ending in decorative pattern, [ΚΡΙΤΙ]/Η? ΤΟΝ/ [Α]ΝΑΤΟ/[ΛΙ]ΚΟΝ = κριτῆ (?) τῶν Ἀνατολικῶν (krites of the theme of Anatolikon), all within dotted border. Concerning the themes of Asia Minor, one of which was the Anatolikon, what is clear is that at some point in the mid-7th century, probably in the late 630s and 640s, the Empire's field armies were withdrawn to Anatolia, the last major contiguous territory remaining to the Empire, and assigned to the districts that became known as the themes. Territorially, each of the new themes encompassed several of the older provinces, and with a few exceptions, seems to have followed the old provincial boundaries. The first four themes were those of the Armeniacs, Anatolics and Thracians, and the Opsician theme. The Armeniac Theme (Θέμα Ἀρμενιᾶκῶν, Thema Armeniakōn), first mentioned in 667, was the successor of the Army of Armenia. It occupied the old areas of the Pontus, Armenia Minor and northern Cappadocia, with its capital at Amasea. The Anatolic Theme (Θέμα Ἀνατολικῶν, Thema Anatolikōn), first mentioned in 669, was the successor of the Army of the East (Ἀνατολή, Anatolē). It covered southern central Asia Minor, and its capital was Amorium. Together, these two themes formed the first tier of defence of Byzantine Anatolia, bordering Muslim Armenia and Syria respectively. Bibliography: Haldon, John F. | 503 |  | FELIPE II, Very RARE! Segovia, Ingenio. 8 reales. 1588. Estrellas de seis puntas separando ley. del anv. Ceca y valor acotados por estrellas y dos decorando el interior de la corona. En rev. las separaciones de ley. son por dos puntos y la fecha finaliza a las 12 h. Cy3978. Fallo de metal en la ley. del rev. SC-/EBC+, gran parte de brillo original en anv. y restos en rev. Magnífico anverso. Tres son los tipos de número 8 que vemos en las monedas de 1588. Por la observación de las monedas del año, bien puede decirse que el transcurrir cronológico en el uso de los mismos es éste: ocho cerrado de tamaño normal (que se venía usando desde el 86), ocho de trazo abierto en la parte superior que curiosamente es exactamente igual al usado para dotar de valor al rincón de Lima (no pensamos que se trate de casualidad, sino a movimiento de talladores) y que es fruto de un clavo parcial, y el ocho cerrado pero diminuto. Este ejemplar, soberbiamente conservado, corresponde al tipo más raro del año: se trata del tipo que ve cómo su leyenda se remata de manera incorrecta (puesto que lo normal sea ver el duro con leyendas correctamente grabadas). Encontraremos este error de dos maneras: acabando la leyenda en HISPANIARV y en HISPANIAR (este caso) y siempre con ceca y ensayador adornados con puntos en lugar de flores o guirnaldas, como se adornan los duros con la leyenda correcta. Sabemos, por la real orden de 28 de febrero de este mismo año, que el Ingenio tenía horario de trabajo de cinco de la mañana a siete de la tarde, con dos horas de descanso para almuerzo, comida y cena. La soldada se entregaba los sábados por la noche. Contaba en este momento el Ingenio con diez molinos hechos de álamo negro que se repartían en dos cuerpos o ingenios menores. El "ingenio grande" se destinaba a laminar el metal, el labrado del cobre y alguna de sus diez ruedas se destinaban a la realización de tornillos (allí donde se repasó el rodillo de esta moneda); el "ingenio pequeño o chico" tenía cuatro ruedas y servía para el oro, la plata y, hasta 1590, el papel.
