It is said in literary sources that Maharaja Agrasen established Agroha around 3rd century BC as a republic, a 'Janapadasa', adopting the principles of social welfare, brotherhood and non-violence. James Prinsep, in 1858, is credited to be the first to publish a coin of the Agreya tribe and Allan, the first to make out the Brahmi script 'Agodaka Janapadasa', attributed to the Republic of Agrodaka or Agreya.

Tribal- Post Mauryan North India, Rajanyas Janapada (100 BC)

Rajanyas were amongst the most prominent tribes in ancient India. The word 'Rajanya' gets first mention in Purusha Sukta of Rigveda. In Sabhaparva (Mahabharata), they have been mentioned with other contemporary tribes i.e. Sibis, Trigartas, Yaudheyas, Madras and Kekayas. They are said to have been vanquished by Yudhishthira along with the Yaudheyas, Arattas and Madrakas. Panini also refers to the people named 'Rajanyas' in his Ganapatha. They are also prominently mentioned in later works like Mahabhashya, Chandravyakarana, Kasika and Sarasvatikanthabharana. Classical writers seem to have referred to them as Xathroi (Chatriaioi by Ptolemy). According to K.K. Dasgupta, Rajanyas lived in eastern Punjab and in eastern Rajasthan. Originally they may have belonged to the Punjab whence from, they probably migrated and settled in eastern parts of Rajasthan. Use of Kharoshthi on their coins indicate a Punjab connection of this tribe.

Note :- The area and period of circulation of the coins of this tribe seems to be pretty restricted in nature. Around thirty pieces are known, most of which are in museums (16 in BM, 7 in IM and 3 in ANS). The coins are die-struck and known in a singular type (standing figure / bull) and two classes (on the basis of use of Brahmi and Kharoshthi scripts).

Tribal - Post Mauryan North India, Shibi Janapada (200 BC)

Shibis were among the earliest tribes of ancient India. They are referred to as Shivas in Rigveda and have been described as defeated by King Sudas along with other tribes like the Alinas, Pakthas, Visanins etc. in the famous battle of ten kings (Dasranya yuddha) somewhere between the rivers Vipas (Beas) and Purushni (Ravi). Aitareya Braman and the Mahabharata have multiple references to these people. One of the most famous kings of this tribe was Usinara who had come in the Swayamvara of Draupadi, later he fought with Pandawas in the famous battle of Mahabharata and he was killed by Dronacharya. Patanjali and Katyayan also refer to this tribe in their works. Buddhist chronicles (Mahamayuri) and Jataka tales describe Sibi country and its cities Ariththapura and Jetuttara, which has been referred as Jattaur by Alberuni, as a place in Mairwar or Mewar and this is exactly the place from where (Nagari and Chittarugarh) the coins of this illustrious tribe have been found.

Note :- Shiva Chitreshwar coins are among the most enigmatic types of entire Tribal coinage of ancient India. First known in 1834 from Saharanpur in UP, this is a highly localized series of tribal coinage, known mostly from Garhwal-Kumaon and adjoining regions. Interestingly, Shiva, in form of a swayambhu linga is still worshipped as Chitresvara by the people of Gopeshwar near Almora in Uttarakhand. As per Hindu mythology, Chitreshwar (Shiva) is father of Kartikeya (Brahmanyadeva), a well known figure from Yaudheya coinage. The legend on these coins i.e. 'Bhagavato Chitresvara Mahatmanah' means (coin of) 'almighty Chitreshwar'. There is absolutely no doubt that the word stands for lord Shiva, who is depicted on the coin. The British Museum collection of 11 such coins comes from Nelson Wright, Spink, Rodgers and Cunningham. These coins are generally struck on Kushana coinage module and seem to have been issued on two weight standards; 160 and 80 Rattis of 18.5 and 9.25 gms. respectively. Since being found, attribution of these coins has been debated. Some scholars were inclined to link these coins with Kunindas whereas others were of the opinion of the Yaudheya issues. This debate is far from settled but coming to similarities with Shadanan Brahmanyadeva type coins than Amoghabhuti coins, the Chitreshwar coins are closer to former rather than latter. Coins of Chitreshvara type are quite rare and only a few pieces are known.

Chandragupta II (Vikramaditya) (375-415 AD)

Chandragupta II (or Vikramaditya, "Sun of Valour"), was celebrated for extending the empire to Ujjain, but his reign became more associated with cultural and intellectual achievements than with military conquest. Fa-Hein, the Chinese traveler and a Buddhist pilgrim who visited India between 399-411 AD primarily for Buddhist studies has mentioned the superior architecture and political greatness in India during the reign of Chandragupta II.

This coin is the living example of the paramountcy of the classical period during Gupta Empire. Historians mentions that the norms of Indian literature, art, architecture, and philosophy were established in this empire. It shows the King seated in a pose classically described as Rajaleela-Asana. The depiction is realistic and executed in a supple style so typical of sculptures of the Gupta period.

The couch type was obviously suggested by the Lyryst type of Samudragupta. On both the coins of these rulers we see the king seated on a high-backed couch, Samudragupta was shown playing lute whereas this coin does not show Chandragupta II playing any musical instrument so he was probably not a musician like his father. The transition can be seen from one ruler type to another clearly. Altekar assumed that this variety was issued as special coronation issue. Allan suggested that these were struck for a special purpose and it may be attributed to Pataliputra.

Altekar mentions one piece each in the collection of the British Museum, Lucknow Museum, Indian Museum (Calcutta) and the Prince of Wales Museum (Bombay). Kumar has mentioned total 8 pieces of this variety which is classified in 2 groups and further classified on the variations of legends in the obverse and reverse. There are totally 5 variations reported by Kumar amongst the 8 recorded pieces till date and he classifies them into two different rulers. The obverse variation is with the extra word "Rupakriti". The reverse variations are goddess holding diadem and empty handed in her left hand, another variation of the legends Sri Vikramah on right and left. On the basis of the title "Sri Vikramah" readable at reverse on this specimen which is seen on the coinage of Chandragupta II, we also attribute this to Chandragupta II same like Allan and Altekar.

Coins of Sultanates of India

Bahmani Sultanate

Bahmani rule commenced at Daulatabad (Fathabad) in the year 1347 AD by Ala ud din Bahman Shah who was supported by other military leaders in rebellion against the Sultan of Delhi, Muhammad Bin Tughluq. The capital was shifted to Gulbarga in 1351 AD and the first eight kings ruled from this capital. Sultan Ala ud din Mujahid Shah Bahmani was the 3rd ruler of the Bahmani Kingdom and the son of Sultan Muhammad Shah I. He ruled at Gulbarga (Ahsanabad) for only a short time of 3 years & ascended the throne at the age of 19 years only upon the death of his father Muhammad Shah I in AH 776/1375 AD. Although the period for which the Sultan ruled his ancestral Kingdom was short, it is considered brilliant as it is said to have witnessed the victorious march of the armies of Islam against the kingdom of Vijayanagar and the abasement of the Raya (King of Vijaynagar).

Soon after his accession, he visited Daulatabad, where he made some administrative arrangements. Then he wrote a letter to the King of Vijayanagar (Bukka I), demanding that he should cede all his territory in the Raichur doab to the Sultan and recognize the river Tungabhadra as the boundary between the two kingdoms. The main interest and ambition for both the kingdoms was to establish their control over Raichur Doab. Being situated in the midst of rivers Krishna and Tungabhadra, this area was very fertile. It is uncertain that the Raya of Vijayanagar refused the proposal or had the understandings between them. The Deccani Muslim historians, Muhammad Qasim Ferishta, Sayyid Ali Bin Aziz Ullah Tabatabai and Rafi ud din Shirazi, does not give the clarity about the conquest and war against the Vijayanagar Kingdom during the reign of Mujahid. There is perplexity whether Mujahid had won against Vijayanagar or had the peace-treaty between them. Mujahid was murdered by his uncle Dawud Khan in 1378 AD, it is uncertain whether he was murdered while campaigning for the retreat to besiege the fort of Adoni or on his way to Mudgal after the peace treaty of Adoni.

The titles he used on the coins where he called himself as the supreme sultan, the shadow of God in the world. His kunya was abu'l mughazi meaning the father of battles

Dawar Bakhsh (AH 1037 / 1627 AD)

Dawar Bakhsh was born to Khusrau Mirza in the year 1607 AD, his name had a divine meaning that was "God Given". He was married in the Royal family of Raja Jai Singh of Amber and ruled the great Mughal Empire for a short time between October 1627-January 1628 AD. Dawar was genealogically the grandson of Jahangir and the son of Khusrau, Khusrau was the eldest son of Jahangir. Jahangir affectionately named Dawar as Bulaqi which means "Nose-Ring". Bulaqi was also named as Diwan of Deccan and later Governor of Gujarat by Jahangir.

When Jahangir died on 28th Safar, A.H. 1037 in Kashmir, his powerful courtier Asaf Khan feared the Queen Nur Jahan would place on the throne her favorite son Shahryar as the new king. He enthroned Sultan Bulaqi, the son of Jahangir's second son Khusrau, as 'Dawar Bakhsh'. The reign of Dawar Bakhsh was precipitated by clever politicking following the death of Jahangir. The mastermind behind this was Asaf Khan, who was the father-in-law of Shahjahan (the father of Mumtaz Mahal) and the brother of Nur Jahan, the ambitious and machinating Empress of Jahangir who had virtually become the master of the Empire given Jahangir's ill health and drug dependence.

Asaf Khan, for his own good, favored Shah Jahan's succession to the throne but he was living the life of an exile faraway at Junnar in Deccan. Nur Jahan's animosity to Shahjahan was well-known. She instead favored Shahryar, Shahjahan's half-brother, to succeed. She quickly alerted him to the death of the Jahangir. Shahryar hastened to Lahore, declared himself the king, took charge of the imperial treasury and set about to raise an army.

In the meantime, Asaf Khan played two games – on one hand, he provided testimonials that Jahangir had nominated Sultan Bulaqi (whom Nur Jahan's had imprisoned) as his successor. He was released from confinement and was declared the Emperor at Bhimbar, soon after the death of Jahangir on 7th November 1627 AD. A small investiture ceremony was held and the Khutba was read in his name. His imperial name was to be 'Abu al-Muzaffar Dawar Bakhsh'. He was only 16 at this time. On the other hand, Asaf Khan secretly sent an envoy to Shahjahan to let him know his father had died, his moment had now arrived and he should quickly make his move to Agra, the imperial capital, to assume the reins of the Empire.

Events gained pace after Jahangir's funeral was held at Lahore on 12th November 1627. Shahryar, successful in raising an army with the cash from the imperial treasury he lavished on his supporters, confronted the retinue of Asaf Khan and Dawar Bakhsh, on their way back to Lahore. A battle ensued on 19th November 1627 in which Shahryar lost heavily. He was imprisoned and blinded by Asaf Khan's partisans. A second, more lavish, coronation was held for Dawar Bakhsh on 20th November 1627, with the Khutba being read in his name at Lahore. He was also additionally called 'Sher Shah' at this instance.

Shahjahan received Asaf Khan's courier on 27th November 1627 and quickly began his way to Agra from Junnar via Gujarat and Rajputana. En route, he assumed the royal titles and began sending imperial orders in his name. He gathered much support from various subject Princes and courtiers, who saw in him a more legitimate heir being the son of the deceased Emperor, than Dawar Bakhsh, who was a grandson and his father Khusrau had already fallen out of grace with Jahangir. On 19th December 1627 Shahjahan received the news of Asaf Khan's victory over Shahryar at Lahore. He made a visit to the shrine of Muinuddin Chishti at Ajmer on 23rd January 1628.

As Shahjahan approached Agra, Asaf Khan's patience with Dawar Bakhsh at Lahore began to run out. On 2nd January 1628, while enjoying the hospitality of the Rana of Mewar, Shahjahan had already sent him a message to get rid of Dawar Bakhsh, through the hands of none other than the executioner who had beheaded Dawar Bakhsh's father Khusrau. While all these machinations were going on, the teenager Dawar Bakhsh gladly played the role of being a sacrificial lamb for Shahjahan. He carried on acting as the Emperor and issuing edicts. When the messenger arrived at Lahore on 28th January 1628, Asaf Khan promptly deposed Dawar Bakhsh. On 29th January 1628, the Khutba was read in Shahjahan's name at Lahore. On 2nd February, Dawar Bakhsh and Shahryar were both killed on Shahjahan's orders along with four other princes who could be potential claimants to the throne. Thus ended Dawar Bakhsh's reign, lasting only for 72 days. On 14th February 1628 AD, Shahjahan formally held his coronation at Agra. The Khutba was once again read in his name, this time at Agra. Reference to Historical Incidents are excerpts from S. Bhandare & J. Lingen.

132. Lahore Mint, Silver Rupee, AH 103X/1 RY, Obv: The Kalima Shahada with Hijri 103x & zarb Lahore, Rev: Abul Muzaffar Dawar Bakhsh Badshah with sana 1 regnal year, 11.3g, 21.5mm, (KM # 195.1), about extremely fine, one test mark on obverse, Exceptionally Rare.

Estimated Price: 12,000,00-15,00,000

Note :- This coin has the date, the RY on this coin is clearly inscribed as numerical '1' and not the Arabic word 'Ahad'. This variation is being noticed rarely in the coins of Dawar Bakhsh and this rupee is hitherto unique in this respect.

As the usual practice was to indicate the RY in this fashion only before the king's official coronation, this coin must have been struck in the period of about 10-12 days, between the enthronement of Dawar Bakhsh at Bhimbar soon after 8th November 1627 AD, and his official coronation which took place at Lahore on 20th November. The fact that 'Khutba' was read in his name in both instances leaves room for the fact that coins might have been struck too. It also indicates that at some point of time in this very short lapse, Dawar Bakhsh must have had some partisans in Lahore, even when Shahryar had taken charge there and assumed royal titles for himself. This could well be regarded as the 'pre-coronation' coin of Dawar Bakhsh.

A pleasing example, with the entire text fully visible with only one test mark, evens the BM and the KM illustrated specimens have test marks. Hull notes only 4 known examples of this ruler but today less than 10 survive.

The first place to be annexed was Darur and it was renamed Fatehabad. Darur was a town of strategic importance situated on a trade route that traversed the Balagat hills towards Telangana. Such a mint name existed only on the Maratha coin of the Maharashtra area which was the name given to Miraj. The occurrence of similar names during the 18th -19th century from Uttar Pradesh is a good addition to numismatic knowledge.

This specimen was found with coins of Murtazabad and hence it is a part of a currency bag from Uttar Pradesh and Uttaranchal. As the coin was found it is certain that it was minted by the Rohillas, most probably by Hafiz Rahmat Khan.

The same mint was sold in our auction no 22 for 50000 INR.

The town of Sambal is situated in the old Muradabad district. It is a Muslim dominated area even today. The earliest occurrence of this name is on the copper Dams of Akbar, where after the mint closed down until the time of Shah Alam II when the Rohillas re-started it to mint their Rupees. The coins have been unlisted in major catalogs thus they are rare.

After the battle of Miranpur Katra, the territory was annexed by Shuja'a ud-Daula, the Nawab of Awadh. The coin could have been issued by anyone of these two contenders. But this specimen bears a Trisul as a mint-mark, it is more likely to have been an issue of Awadh. There is also a possibility of Shahjahanpur, presently known as "Shajapur" and is located in central Madhya Pradesh. Shajapur named in the honor of Shahjahan the Mughal Emperor who halted here in 1640. It is said that the original name was Shahjahanpur, which subsequently reduces to Shajapur. This town was under the control of Gwalior and it is likely that a mint was operated here in 1775 under the aegis of Gwalior.

It had in its cargo Gold valued at One Million Pounds. Few Salvagers formed a Salvage Company called 'SORIMA', they hired a cargo ship called 'Artiglio' with the sole purpose of salvaging the One Million Pound worth of Gold in SS Egypt. In June of 1932 they were able to salvage the gold and along with it the unsigned notes of Hyderabad in denominations of 5, 10 & 100. There were a total of 1,65,000 notes of which after protracted negotiations through his advocates with 'Sorima', the Nawab of Hyderabad bought back 1,28,000 notes in July 1939. These bank notes were burnt in London. The remaining notes are either with collectors or are missing under the sea. These notes were printed by Waterlow & Sons.
